I Was A Nazi Prisoner

CHAPTER FOUR
That first day in German-occupied France was a dramatic one. It brought the loss of our American friends and the first inkling that all might not be rosy in the future for us.

It was a cold grey morning. Someone who had summered once at Saint-Jean de Luz, came on deck and identified it for others who were not quite sure of where we were. "We called it Saint-Jean de Pucies," she said. "I wonder if the Golf Hotel still boasts as many fags."

The whole morning was spent in just about as idle speculation as that. Noody was allowed off the ship. German officials, came aboard and closeted themselves with the Dresden's captain. People stood about in restless groups, discussing what would probably happen next. About mid-noon had doubled the word of high naval authority on the Tamsic; that all women and children, regardless of nationality, were to be released with the Americans.

A proviso did accompany the official pronouncement at Saint-Jean de Luz. It was that our crew were to be considered, individually, in Bordeaux. So, though we packed our last hour with the Americans with farewells and messages to be delivered to families and friends, I remember feeling personally that we were rather over-dramatizing the situation—that we would be seeing them all again within a week or two. This was just a temporary nuisance, I thought—the Germans were putting themselves to a lot of unnecessary trouble taking us to Bordeaux only to have to send us back again. It was a sad moment when the last small boat with the last departing Americans pushed off from morning a wild rumor circulated (emanating I think from a Swiss reporter who had come on to the ship) that all Americans were to be released. No one took that very seriously. Certainly I didn't. Everyone has famous sayings attributed to them and mine of that morning apparently was that my only talent lay in arranging flowers and as there would be no flowers in German prisons the Germans wouldn't want me. But it seems they did. About 2 o'clock the wild rumor was substantiated. All Americans were to leave the ship at three, to be taken to barracks where the American Consulate would arrange for their homeward trip. All Britons were to proceed to Bordeaux.

FAREWELL TO AMERICANS
It was a crushing blow—how so because of the total unexpectedness. Perhaps we were gullible—if so, the gullibility was common to the whole prisoner list, for I'm sure not one person, nor the Dresden. A forlorn handful of left-overs, we lined the rail and watched them go, our very good friends with whom we had shared an experience that binds people together in no ordinary way. Besides losing some good friends, we naturally had felt a sense of protection in the company of so many Americans. With their departure we waited with some interest to see if our treatment might alter in any way. After all, we were now the enemy, undisciplined. And in one instance it did. There was an officer aboard who during the whole trip thus far had been more than uniformly polite—he had sailed in the merchant service before the war, had been accustomed to entertaining the passengers, regretted very much our unfortunate situation, and hoped that when we reached port he would be able to make it up to us in some small way by giving us a drink or dinner at one of the better hotels.

Serb Guerillas Using Captured German Planes

By JOHN A. PARRIS

LONDON, Aug. 6.—(BUP)—Yugoslav guerillas under Gen. Draza Mihailovic have used two captured German dive bombers to help beat back Axis occupation troops in spreading battles, reports said today.

Moscow radio said two Junkers 88s seized at a German airbase enabled the Yugoslavs to capture Kijue and several other Croat villages. Mihailovic's forces were said to have captured enemy planes, but were unable to put them to use because of lack of fuel.

The danger in the Caucasus increased, however, as the Germans drove new wedges into a strong line east of the Don river, were driving back Soviet divisions.

A bulletin from German field headquarters said Nazi spearheads, racing southward from Voroshilovsk had reached the main Trans-Caucasian railway linking the Black and Caspian seas.

This apparently meant the invaders had seized the rail line between Voroshilovsk and the Caspian Sea, key position on the route, some 100 miles in the vicinity of Nevinnomysskaya, which lies due south of Voroshilovsk.

It would represent an advance of about 225 miles into the Caucasus.

Announces Plan

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

CADOMTIN, Aug. 6.—

Grief-stricken residents of this mountain mining town gathered at the head of No. 9 Cadomtin mine shaft Thursday morning and saw a rescue party slowly approaching.

With baited breath the spectators saw the party come to halt and lay down its stretcher. On the stretcher was the body of Victor Allegretto, one of the five miners trapped when a torrent of water, breaking through into their tunnel and through into old mine workings, closed out their lives.

The tragedy struck the mine at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Body of John Vallance, miner, was recovered Wednesday night, but his fate is still unknown.

The three others still alive are being brought out, but their fate is still unknown.

Joseph Dombrowski, miner, was brought out Wednesday night.

All five were from Montana residents.

ESCAPE

Three of the four miners who escaped from No. 9 mine, are Peter Lash, Michael Kajunski and Harry Pison, all of Cadomtin.

They were trapped in the mine prop, loose coal and other debris, which entangled the bodies of the men.

Nearly every resident of this town at the head of the shaft to await news of their escape. Grm, grief-stricken faces awaited news of their escape.

Women sobbed. Men suppressed tears in their throats.

It was the second time in three days this town had seen such a tragedy.

For the second time in three years grief-stricken relatives and miners waited at the minehead early Wednesday evening, hoping to see the bodies of their men alive as each trip of the hoist brought up a body.

Double shifts of men are working now in the mine, to prevent a time wait-dread, removing coal, props and timbers in an effort to prevent further accidents.

Looking Them Over

By Jack Kelly

ONE of the strongest trends to develop in Alberta sport during the last decade has been the swing toward personal participation rather than passive watching. The tendency is more noticeable in lawn bowling perhaps than any other.

Primarily a leisurely game in which skill counts for everything and there is no advantage, lawn bowling has grown by leaps and bounds in this province. When the first provincial tournament was staged here, the game was almost non-existent in most parts of Alberta. The fine entry of players from Calgary, Medicine Hat and Lethbridge in the current tournament is ample evidence of the growing popularity of the pastime that sold Sir Francis Drake when the Spanish Armada was beating down on England.

The game offers ideal sport and relaxation for those who are past the age when the more strenuous sports can be indulged in without any physical harm.

It also has all the social charm of cricket. It's hard to imagine a more pleasant way of spending a leisurely evening than clubbing at one of Edmonton's many fine clubs with their velvet green attractive shrubbery and comfortable club chairs.

Next step in the growth of lawn bowling in Alberta will undoubtedly be the start of greens in the smaller towns and cities. So far, few if any exist outside the larger cities. Water works and the city need to build and maintain a green, but such facilities are available in most of the larger towns now.

Junior Play Friday

FRIDAY night the Canadians and Cubs half off and start all over again in the best of five series for the championship of the Edmonton Junior Baseball League as a result of their 4-4 deadlock in Tuesday's opener.

This tie-fitter was just as good as a score. Furthermore, it seems every reason to expect that the balance of the series will not be far off this caliber. Both clubs have strengthened some of their weaker spots and their close balance of pitching power has been established.

Thomas is the likely pitcher for the Cubs' pitching job on Friday, while Reits, the Barbours' home pitcher, is expected to be the Barbours' Coach Joe Shandro of the Canadians.

OATS, BARLEY LATER THAN USUAL

Prospects Of Record Crops In Alberta Are Maintained

Wheat Well Headed Out As Rapid Development Follows General Rains

Prospects of a record crop have been maintained during the past two weeks, with wheat well headed out and in excellent condition, according to the semi-monthly crop report released Thursday by Hon. D. Bruce MacMillan, provincial minister of agriculture.

General rains and warmer weather have brought about rapid development of the crops. Moisture supplies are still satisfactory except in the southeast and the Peace River district where general rains would be beneficial.

Wheat in excellent condition and headed out, oats and barley are headed but development is somewhat later than usual. The flax crop is good and in the south is coming into flower. Heavy moisture has delayed haying in many sections, but rapid rains have been made during the past week.

LITTLE DAMAGE
 Very little damage has been reported. Grasshoppers have been active in the south and east-central parts of the province, but damage to date has been slight. Wheat, timothy and alfalfa in the southern and eastern sections and it would appear that damage will be severe in some sections unless proper control measures were taken under this summer.

Lodging of heavy crops, especially barley on low-lying land, has been in most districts.

Rains have been general over the province with the exception of the extreme southeastern portion and the Peace River district where the weather has been dry. Timely rains will be beneficial.

Livestock is reported in excellent condition. Pastures have been very good during the season and supply for an abundant feed supply are promising.

Hog marketing to date have reached record proportions and is expected marketing will continue heavy this fall.

Due to excellent pasture conditions, cream deliveries have been held up. There has been some diversion of deliveries from these factories to creameries due to the federal government subsidy on cream. Milk production on the whole will be slightly above last year.

There has been a substantial increase in farm poultry flocks. Marketing of eggs are well above last year.

The report states that in the Edmonton district wheat and coarse grains are in excellent condition.

Getting Around

with Jack DeLong

Announcement that Alberta will provide free surgery for cancer sufferers is another reminder of how this province is continuing to lead not only Canada, but also North America, and possibly the entire world, in the fight against this deadly disease.

Many leading doctors have stated that one of the greatest barriers on the road to recovery from cancer is the mental worry caused by fear of incurring indebtment.

Not only does the fear of indebtedness retard recovery but it may cause it prevents a person from seeking treatment until it is too late.

Hon. Dr. W. W. Cross, provincial minister of health, and other members of the Alberta government who pioneered in the humanitarian legislation leading up to free treatment for cancer, are to be heartily congratulated. Probably the day is not so far distant when the health of human beings will be looked upon as an integral part of national defence, when the course it actually is.

In the meantime, has off to Alberta, the province that is leading the way to all the world in this all-important matter.

After making the plane trip to Whitehorse over the weekend we are starting to wonder if the ceiling has been heard of in the Yukon. If what we were told of rest paid by a couple of men might be a little more correct, it would seem that rental control is also not in operation in the Klondike.

Meals at a dollar each is not too bad, but what about soft drinks at 25 cents a bottle may be a little more than for the north. One dollar a bottle for beer is pretty steep, you must admit. But the real jolt is the hotel rates.

Two young men engaged a room for six days. The room contained two beds and that was about all. They were handed a bill for $102. We are informed, if it is correct, it looks as if several people could get extremely busy repairing the price ceiling in the hotel under the spell of the Yukon.

The word "Gethsemane" is Hebrew for "wine press."

Black Bear Rustles Plenty Food in Raid On Kitchen Supplies

By JACK DeLONG

Chasing bears is not usually considered a popular kind of sport. As a matter of fact I had been of the opinion that chasing people was a pastime greatly enjoyed by bears.

Well this story is really different because men chase bears and a "man" is in turn chased by a bear.

The C.P. Airways Ltd. plane on which I was returning from the Yukon, stopped down at landing at the Fort Nelson airport. Piling out of a jeep were several United States Army engineers, who have been working along the Alaska Highway.

The face of a slender, sun-browned young corporal seemed antsy. He felt sure he had met him before. And I was right.

He had been through a train that passed through Edmonton for the north last March. And he also remembered me.

As the plane was staying just a few minutes I asked him: "How are things going? Are you homesick? What do you do in your spare time?"

Some of the questions shot at our friend the corporal with machine-gun like rapidity.

GOING FINE "The answer to your first question is that the work on the highway is going just fine. We are starting to see daylight ahead," said the little corporal.

"And as to the second question, well, what do you think? Certainly we're homesick. We're mighty long way from Philadelphia, Cleveland and Chattanooga, ain't it?"

"As to spare time we don't have much. The boys have been working two 12-hour shifts during these long days of summer up here. I was to Fort St. John for two days on one week-end leave in four months. We wonder if anyone knows that the war is over. It's business when we read and hear about soldiers' wives, double time and holidays.

FRESH FRUIT WELCOME
 "If you want to become immortal to the U.S. engineers, send us a few carloads of fresh fruits and vegetables. Yesterday we had our first shipment of fresh fruits since we came in. It was just sufficient for one meal," he smiled.

Summer School Term Ends Friday

The teachers taking home economic and shop courses this summer have exhibited their work at the Technical school yesterday. G. Manning, director of the summer school, was present at the annual exhibit.

Examinations are being given in all courses Thursday and the session for 1942 will end on Friday.

This concludes a very active summer school program of useful lectures, plays, pictures and inspirational work.

Members of the Edmonton Lions' Club met at the MacDonald Hotel Thursday night for their regular weekly luncheon. Vic Michener, Lions' vice-president, was chairman of the informal discussion that followed the luncheon. There was no set agenda.

They say he's been trying to join a suicide squad ever since, the corporal explained.

The black bears are very numerous along the route of the Alaska Highway and in the north more than ever. There are quite a few grizzlies.

The corporal and the rest of the boys waved goodbye as the plane roared down the runway and soared away toward Edmonton.

LUCKY PENNY

By GLORIA KAYE

From Mansion and Sables to a Job in A Hash House is Quite a Step for Penny

THE BULLETIN PRESENTS LATEST SERIAL STORY ABOUT A GIRL WHO WAS HAPPIER WITH NOTHING THAN SHE WAS WITH MILLIONS!

CHAPTER ONE
FLAMING skies were no novelty to Penny Kirk. She had seen London's inferno of burning bombs. She had seen blazing France. Now Penny drove leisurely along a road carpeted by heavens of red—but this was different. The glare in the skies was friendly, comforting, reflecting the glowing furnaces of the Kirk mills—her home.

There, Penny knew, was where she belonged. In all the years she had spent abroad she had never from harsh reality. They had never taken an interest in the mills. Their life, and hers, had been luxuriously idle. Now, alone, she had longed to reach her life from foundations shattered by the thunder of war over Europe. Penny felt as if she were rising in a fabulously rosy toy balloon. How different, she reflected, from her last long ride through France. There, too the skies were red. Death and destruction rode in the clouds that awful day.

Penny shuddered, remembering that wild ride from her villa to sea-prayed winds! Sophisticated conversation meant nothing to her. She had shared their dread of the next few minutes might bring.

In New York, Penny had gone to only one cocktail party. It was no good. She couldn't help contrasting the false, forced gaiety of her placid friends with the natural laughter of the ship-board children who were so sincere in their appreciation of her half-remembered stories.

Without fanfare, without so much as a single newspaper interview, without posing for a single retouched picture, Penny had left New York. "I'm somebody new," she had told herself. "I left the Kirk Princess Kirk in France. Now I had better go home—really home—and find myself again."

The Kirk estate, overlooking a valley that was green along its upper slopes and brown along the river that served the steel mills, was more beautiful than she had dreamed it would be. Kirkwood nestled like a doll village down below.

Late in the afternoon of her unheralded arrival, after cautioning her caretaker and his wife to let no one see her, Penny selected a gray roadster and started out for Kirkwood. The winding road down to the river was pleasant, cool in leathening shadows, as dusk deepened, the furnaces lit the somber skies with an ever brightening glow. The summer night was calm and peaceful. The roadster heard a fork in the road. One tangent stretched invitingly upward, toward a white building overlooking the river. The other, past little houses whose lights were just now beginning to blink. Another road stretched downward to the mills and the river. Penny chose the upward road.

At the top of the hill, the white building she had noticed was framed by hidden recesses in the shrubbery. Now Penny could see the name above the entrance. "John Kirk Memorial Auditorium," she read. Penny stopped. She read the name again. "John Kirk Memorial Auditorium." How like Grandfather John to present to his gift to his town.

Nothing she had ever experienced could equal Penny's thrill at the sight of the hill, the white building, so like a Greek temple, the auditorium, so like a Greek temple.

How appropriate, she thought. At the foot of the hill stretched the giant busy mills, making fiery sparks every night and all through the day to this shrine of their feast.

For a long time Penny remained thus, in worshipping silence, oblivious to the murmur of conversation around her. She was a stroller who passed by. Her stroller was rude. She heard a bitter, vicious voice, whose words she knew could not have been directed to her. But they seemed like a hot iron pressed against her chest.

"John Kirk Memorial Auditorium! They should have shaped it into a heart of stone. That's what John Kirk was really like. The poor and died to build this thing! They lived in ratholes and dressed in rags so he could see the glory of a pretty marble palace to show them how puny they really are."

Slowly Penny turned to face the speaker. Her cheeks were flushed with anger. Her tongue was ready to lash out in biting rebuttal. Then she stopped and stared in wide-eyed amazement.

There was no mistaking him. The last time Penny had seen Jim Vickers had been several years earlier in Paris. He hadn't changed at all. What strange coincidence had brought this tall, broad-shouldered, tweed-suited man to Kirkwood?

She knew that round, boyish face. She knew his searching, troubled blue eyes. Jim Vickers, apple-cheeked, good-humored, sea-corroded for a New York newspaper, had been a familiar figure in her circle abroad.

He passed within a few inches of her, but showed no sign of recognition. Of course he wouldn't know her. Penny realized. She had changed. Strangely as it was listening to a busy voice in an impossible nightmare, she heard Jim Vickers say:

"The Kirks were a pretty selfish breed. I met John Kirk's grand-daughter abroad. A little slip of a spoiled brat without an ounce of common sense in her head. She owns the Kirk mills now."

Penny felt lonely and sick at heart. Should she risk further disillusionment by visiting the mills? Would she find the Kirk name a rather than a proud heritage? Would it be better to re-discover herself in some gentler way?

"I'll sleep on it," she decided, driving slowly, thoughtfully home. (To Be Continued)

MEASURING METHOD
When determining the limits of Albany, New York, in 1942, Peter Stuyvesant fired a cannon ball north and another south. Then he declared all the land in the space between the cannon balls to be within the city's limits.

Penny stared up at the gracefully colonnaded edifice, so like a Greek temple. At the foot of the hill stretched the giant busy mills, making fiery sparks every night to this shrine of their founder.

before thought of Kirkwood as the safe haven of a port from which she could embark for the United States. She had been crowded into an army car manuevered by a sudden gale in uniform. Her companions were a diplomat's heavy-set wife and a trench-coated correspondent.

The diplomat's wife faintly recalled every five minutes. The newspaperman betrayed his shakiness by smoking a madly endless chain of cigarettes. All about them were havoc, destruction, misery.

Penny had never realized how much the simple initials "U.S.A." could mean. Not until she had crossed the dangerous Atlantic in a blackened refugee ship. Not until she stood on deck and went unashamedly, with all the rest of the passengers, at sight of the Statue of Liberty.

That trip had done something to Penny's point of view. Having Pierre created a new culture for her every week didn't seem so important. He would have called the way he naturally beautiful traces now lay loosely on her shoulders "terrible-ine."

Her blue eyes had once expressed a carefully affected boredom, a coolness and hauteur. About ship she had discovered they could inspire confidence and in frightened fellow passengers.

What good were formal evening gowns and a wardrobe that included the finest of Paris creations when a trench coat provided so much protection against the
